Judge Hamilton is anxious to appea before the Fowler Committee of New York Life to-morrow and make another speech in the strain of the one he delivered before the Legislature las Thursday, and, according to his friends, he is more than anxious to tell the Grand Jury all he knows about campaign contributions and the method of extracting them.

Hamilton's willingness to testify is known to District-Attorney Jerome. The knowledge, it is asserted, came through Anthony N. Brady, the business assodate of Thomas F. Ryan. Mr. Brady a friend of the District-Attorney and also of Mr. Hamilton.

Hamfiton, it is asserted, will tell the mand jurors as much more as they want to know about certain individuals who for years have posed as philan thropists, but in reality have been common grafters, according to him, living Euxuriously from the funds of these
